

The Examiner

NEWS CAMPAIGN 2012 LOCAL OPINION SPORTS ENTERTAINMENT CONTESTS AUTOS

Nation World Business Science and Technology

macy's HUGE SAVINGS

News

Gov's husband pushing for literacy funding

1 month 1 week ago

0 Comments

FILE - In this Nov. 4, 2010 photo, New Mexico's first-ever

The Associated Press

With about 46 percent of New Mexico's native English speakers reading at a sixth-grade level or below, the New Mexico Coalition for Literacy is pushing the Legislature for more funding.

Popular in News

1 Apparent tornadoes hit Alabama homes.

And helping drive their efforts is first gentleman Chuck Franco.

The husband of Gov. Susana Martinez spoke at a news conference earlier this week about his support for expanding such services and the

Free Sunday Home Delivery

Request your copy today!

U.S. Open tees up $140m for region

CLICK HERE

Top Five Stories

Metro chief doesn't like 'Go to hell Barack' ad, but says it must stay

Obama calls Georgetown student in contraception debate

Apparent tornadoes hit Alabama homes, prison

House shocker: Rep. Norm Dicks retiring

- prison
- 2 MontCo lawmaker wants deer culled from C&O Canal
- 3 IRS battling conservatives over tax-exempt status
- 4 Senate defeats bill to reverse birth control rule
- 5 Andrew Breitbart dies in LA at 43

goal of eradicating illiteracy in New Mexico.

"My interest in adult literacy came to me when I was in law enforcement," Franco told a small crowd gathered at St. Francis Hotel in downtown Santa Fe.

Adult literacy is one of three causes Franco has decided to take on. The others are Horses for Heroes and the Youth Diagnostic Development Center in Albuquerque.

Franco said that when he started working with troubled youth, he realized that their issues ran beyond behavioral problems. Having parents at home who couldn't read was one of them.

Having a well-educated population is important for New Mexico's economic advancement, Franco said. Companies interested in coming to New Mexico want to know that there is a prepared workforce.

Supporting the New Mexico Coalition for Literacy also complements Gov. Susana Martinez' push to improve K-12 education in the state, Franco said.

"I think we all need to participate in order to give New Mexico the workforce we need," Franco said. "If we wait for another generation to slip through the cracks, we are going to be in bad shape."

The coalition, which has been in Santa Fe for 25 years, is one way to help improve adults' reading skills, Franco said.

Funded by the Department of Cultural Affairs through the New Mexico State Library, the coalition currently operates on a $325,000 budget, down from the $755,000 budget it had before the economy tanked. The coalition funds 23 literacy programs throughout the state, including Literacy Volunteers of Santa Fe.

Executive Director Heather Heunermund said funding cuts reduced services across the state. During the Legislature's current 30-day session, the organization will ask for an additional $347,200, she said. To help ease the strain, Public Service Co. of New Mexico's Resources Foundation awarded the literacy coalition a $20,000 grant on Wednesday.

The number of illiterate or functionally literate adults in New Mexico derives from various sources: U.S. Census Bureau data and a 1993 National Assessment of Adult Literacy Survey (the most recent survey available). In the near future, the coalition plans to work with New Mexico State University to create a localized literacy survey.

Some New Mexico residents might feel ashamed to admit they don't know how to read, said Donna Aragon, the coalition's state volunteer training coordinator.

Prince George's councilwoman barred from county-owned vehicle

Get E-Mail Updates

Enter Email Address

RSS Like 10k Follow

THE 42-MPG-HWY'
2012 CHEVY CRUZE ECO

> Learn more

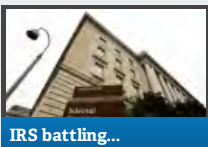

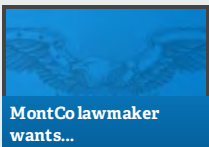

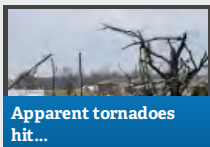

EPA estimate.

Chevy Runs Deep

"The hardest population to reach is the native English speakers," Aragon said. "English learners come looking for the service."

Information from: The Santa Fe New Mexican, <http://www.sfnewmexican.com>

More From this Section

Top 2012 Online Grants
 Grant Funding May Be Available See If You Qualify!
www.ClassesUSA.com AdChoices

Advertisement

	"Renegade" trader spills secret to becoming rich with dirt cheap penny stocks...		Cerrillos - New rule allows many New Mexico residents to get car insurance at half-price.
	(New Mexico): $9 Car Insurance Trick? - I discovered the 1 trick your agent will never tell you...		Have a $500,000 portfolio? Ken Fisher, a 27-year Forbes columnist, has a retirement guide for you!

Comments for this page are closed.

Showing (0) comments

Sort by popular now ▼

Subscribe by email RSS

Trackback URL <http://disqus.com/for>

				Sections				Business	Products	Partners
Share: Today's Paper	News Nation World Business	Politics Campaign 2012 White House Congress	Local D.C. MD VA	Sports NFL Redskins Ravens MLB Nationals	MLS DC United Golf College	Entertainment Food & Wine Music Theater	Opinion Letters to the Editor Columnists Editorials	Rack Locations Advertise Terms of Use Privacy	Classifieds Cars Homes Jobs

Health
Science & Technology

Beltway Confidential
Yeas and Nays

Education
Transportation
Crime

Orioles
NHL
Capitals
NBA
Wizards

Movies
TV
Wheels
Travel
Health

Nate Beeler's Toons

Circulation Requests
Contact Us